Some enterprising financiers at New York have started the project of a bullion bank in that city, the main purpose of which seems to be to regulate the exchanges by means of the issue of certificates of deposits of gold, which certificate the projectors believe will be the most desirable medium of remittance from New York to the interior, and from the interior back to New York again—the result of which will be a larger stock of coin all the time at New York, which, it is modestly claimed for that city, will keep the whole country financially steady and strongthe idea being that, as New York is the banker of the continent, if she is strong in ready money, the whole country must feel strong. The people of the "continent" will, no doubt, feel financially greatly obliged for this patronizing care of our modest neighbors. This, however, is the project in brief:

To found a bank here at the centre of finance of this continent which shall discount (not, as some say, lend on bond and mortgage) only to the extent of its own capital. Its deposites are not to be used, any part of them, by the bank, but are to be retained always in actual cash to the order of the several depositors; the deposites will, consequently, be always to the full amount on hand in coin. The revenue of the bank (other than the interest on its own capital) is to consist of small banking commissions charged to depositors; on small accounts more, on large accounts less. The largest commission proposed is 1-10 of one per cent., or $5 on a person's Income of $5,000 per annum; on larger accounts as low as 2-100 of one per cent., and on very large accounts a small annual sum in lieu of commissions. As its projectors propose to limit the dividends to 7 per cent., these charges will be reduced with the increase of business, and will always be kept down to the amount actually necessary to pay expenses.

we have no idea that such a scheme is likely to be car We have no idea that such a scheme is likely to be carried into practical operation very soon. There are difficulties not easily reconciled, and which do not enter into the working of the Bank of Hamburg, which is probably taken as the model of the proposed bank at New York. The field of operation of a bank here, of the kind named, is so much more extended than that of the Hamburg bank, as to render the success of the latter no sort of evidence of a like result for the former. The Bank of Hamburg is so rigidly a bullion bank, that if coin be deposited in it, the coin is at once melted up into bars of bullion, old is taken, by that process, comparatively out of cirin it, the coin is at once melted up into bars of bullion, and is taken, by that process, comparatively out of circulation. Nor does the Bank of Hamburg allow, as this bank proposes to do, transfers by checks. The rule there is that a principal of the firm having funds there shall appear personally at the bank and there transfer the desired amount on the books of the bank, and a sum once so transferred cannot be transferred again on the same day. Such a course would hardly answer the go-aheaditiveness of young America, whose doings are considered of the old fogy order, unless daily several times duplicated.

THE OHIO STATE HOUSE ON FIRE.

On the morning of the 5th instant, a fire was discovered in the basement room in the northeast corner of the building, directly under the office of the Secretary of State, and used by that officer as a storeroom, and by workmen as a paint shop. After an hour's strenuous exertions by the firemen, the flames were extinguished. Five or six hundred volumes of public documents, embracing the only complete set extant of documents from the first organization of the territorial government to the present time, were totally rained. These documents were of great value as records, and it will be impossible to replace them. Their real value is incalculable, though probably the whole lot would not have sold for $100. The total loss of the State will perhaps reach $500, aside from the expense of repairing the room, the walls, windows and doors of which are considerably damaged.

As to the origin of the fire, nothing is known. The doors were locked, and there was but one opening in the room through which fire could have been communicated to the material inside, which was a window let down from the top about four inches. No smoking was allowed in the shop, and it is thought to be the work of an incendiary, though what object any one could have had in setting fire to the stuff must be a matter of speculation.

THE RISKS OF TRAVELLERS.

THE RISKS OF TRAVELLERS.

That human life is regarded at too cheap a rate in this country, is a fact that has been, alas! but too evident for the last half century, and in nothing is it more fatally exemplified than in travelling. Strange that amongst a people who, more than all others, recognise that truth of the maxim that "time is money," there should be so much neglect of the proper safe-guards of life, the most precious thing on earth, knowing, as we do, that death is a loss of all time forever. Still, on we go, heedlessly, rapidly, and recklessly! If a steamer explode or a railway train be thrown down an embankment or into a river, and hundreds fill untimely graves—the tragedy is not only soon forgotten, but, to! in many instances meetings are held by the surviving passengers, and the conductors and engineers are excnerated from all blame. At does with coroner's juries—for who has time to waste in the perquisitions of justice, or can afford a few hours from their business avecations, on account of the deat—or for the safety of the living, if the parties summoned are not personally interested! This is all money, and our attention is called to the matter just now by an able article in the New York Courier. With regard to steam navigation the writer says: navigation the writer says:

To show the great risk of steamship travelling over To srow the great risk of steamship travelling over railroad travelling, let us examine the comparative risk per mile to each passenger. It appears from the best statistics that in the last four years the risk to each pas-senger of being killed in going one mile was:

These figures protest strongly against the management of some, at least, of our Atlantic stramship companies. According to these statistics a passenger could go from here to California by re'lroad with the same risk as to travel five miles in a steamship. Who will say that the unavoidable risks are in this ratio?

A TERRIBLE ENCOUNTER WITH BULL-DOGS.

Yesterday Reed E. Young, the well-know.r pilot, was most terribly bitten and lacerated by two fierce dogs, the property of a milkman of the name of Rh'uehart, we believe. It occurred in the Salt River lane in the lower part of the city, just as Mr. Young was walking towards the railroad track. The dogs suddenly jumped on b'm, one seizing him by the calf of the leg, and the other attempting to catch him by the throat. He had presence of mind sufficient to throw up his arm in defence of his throat, and the dog seized him by the arm, tearing away the cloches and flesh in a terrible manner. The other dog tore the flesh from his leg, severing an artery. He then caught Young by the top of his head with his teeth, and literally tore off the scalp. The other dog fastened his fangs in his breast, and they had so completely worried and bitten him that he was almost ex-[From the Jonisy De Courier.] letely worried and bitten him that he was almost exausted and entirely overpowered, and, but for the mely assistance of a neighbor, would have been killed atright. The man attacked them with a club, and had outright. The man attacked them with a club, and had much difficulty in getting them loose from their prey.

Great excitement was created in the neighborhood by the terrible affair, and a crowd of people assembled to hent the dogs and kill them. They were shot with bird shot, but got away before more effective weapons could be obtained. A party, however, soon started in pursuit with ritles and axes, and they will certainly be killed as soon as found. Mr. Young is a tall, stout man, and was one of the survivors of the terrible Pennsylvania disaster. We hope the wounds inflicted by the dogs will prove less dangerous than represented, and that he will soon be out again.

We learn that one of the does was killed, but the other

We learn that one of the dogs was killed, but the other we can that one of the dogs was thired, but the other sceaped. A boy was the first one to interfere in behalf of Mr. Young, by shooting at one of the dogs with a pis-tol, scaring the brute off. The muscles of both of Mr. Young's arms are terribly torn, and he is also severely bitter in the back.

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

STEAN FIRE ESGERS seem to be gradually growing in public favor, and wherever they have had a fr' trial, we believe they have given complete satisfaction. There are a ready two in Baltimore, and a third has just been purchased, and will be worked by the Vigilant Fire Company. It was obtained in Philadelphia, at a cest of $3,400; the cylinder is 91 'nches in diameter, and has twelve inches stroke of piston. Another, from Seneca Falls, N. Y., has just been on exhibition in Boston, and its performance was highly satisfactory. But very few minutes are required in getting up steam, and the stream thrown is more strady and power, all than can be produced by bone and murcle, which renders these machines far superior to the old fire engines in extensive confingrations. When shall we halt the advent of one of these improved engines in Washington? Although disastrous fires seldom occur here, yet the smount of public and private property in this city, and the fact that the place is rapidly growing, call for the adoption of all the means of security which science and set have placed within human reach.
